Hiring Team
Airbnb.org

Dear Airbnb.org Team,

Building a global housing access program that connects nonprofit missions to millions of real places, real people, and real needs? That's exactly the kind of challenge I'm built for.

Over the past decade, I've led cross-functional programs in tech and operations—designing onboarding systems, aligning product and platform needs, and building the internal architecture to help teams scale responsibly. At SpiderOak, I helped lead our post-Series C transformation, managing programs that spanned engineering, customer success, and legal operations. I've built systems that supported growth, documented what worked, and iterated toward outcomes that stuck.

But what makes this role personal for me is my volunteer work in housing access. I've spent years working with nonprofits and community organizations in the Kansas City area to help individuals and families find emergency shelter, cover rent, or access long-term housing solutions. That experience has shaped how I think about dignity, logistics, and the power of simply getting someone into a safe space—fast.

Airbnb.org's vision resonates deeply with both sides of my background: platform-level systems thinking, and human-level empathy. I'd be honored to help build the infrastructure that expands your mission to thousands of nonprofits and millions of guests around the world.

Thanks for the work you're doing—and for considering my application. I'd love to talk more.

Warmly,
Adam Tervort
