Hiring Team

Anchorage Digital

Dear Anchorage Team,

What drew me to this role—besides the Hamilton reference—is your clarity about what great people operations actually look like: scalable, human, compliance-ready, and clearly connected to company goals. That’s the kind of work I love doing.

For the last several years, I’ve led People Ops and internal systems for SpiderOak, a remote-first SaaS company operating across the U.S. and Europe. I built our onboarding, offboarding, and internal mobility programs; helped lead the charge on compliance and handbook development; and rolled out performance and feedback systems that supported both scale and culture. I’ve worked directly with leadership to align team goals to company OKRs, and built documentation systems that made our work transparent, repeatable, and genuinely useful.

This role at Anchorage hits the sweet spot between rigor and humanity. I enjoy solving process puzzles—but I also care deeply about trust, clarity, and helping people do their best work. That’s the kind of org I want to build, and it sounds like that’s the kind of org you’re building, too.

If this sounds aligned, I’d love to talk more.

Warmly,

Adam Tervort
