Hiring Team
CaptivateIQ

Dear CaptivateIQ Team,

Over the past 12 years at SpiderOak, I've worked across nearly every facet of customer experience—from frontline support to building our customer success function from the ground up. Whether supporting enterprise, commercial, or government accounts, I've seen firsthand how meaningful, well-aligned CX strategy can transform customer outcomes—and internal team performance.

So when I read about this role, I didn't just see a good match—I saw work I've already been preparing to do. I know what it takes to align CX strategy with company objectives, integrate systems across teams, and build enablement infrastructure that actually scales. I've led post-Series C operational planning, owned cross-functional OKRs, and launched lifecycle programs that improved retention and team clarity. My leadership style is strategic but very human: people-first, outcome-focused, and grounded in systems thinking.

Also—and I mean this sincerely—trying to manage sales commissions in Excel was one of the worst internal experiences of my early SaaS life. It's a deceptively painful problem. I love that you've taken it seriously and built real solutions for it. Everyone in SaaS knows that pain, and I'd be excited to help design the kind of customer experience that turns it into relief.

If it sounds like we might be aligned, I'd love to talk more.

Warmly,
Adam Tervort
