Hiring Team
EvenUp

Dear EvenUp Team,

Back in college, I spent a lot of time prepping for the LSAT—enough to develop a lasting admiration for the legal field, even though I didn't end up going to law school. What stuck with me is how much of the legal process is structured human work: smart people navigating complexity in service of fairness and better outcomes. That's why EvenUp's mission resonates so strongly with me. I believe legal tech has enormous potential to remove friction and free people to focus on the work that matters most.

For the past decade, I've led high-performance operations in fast-growing SaaS companies, including building and scaling the entire operational backbone at SpiderOak post-Series C. My work has included team performance frameworks, compensation model design, KPI tracking infrastructure, and manager coaching—often across multiple departments and geographies. I've helped build systems that enable people to execute at a high level without burning out or getting buried in process debt.

The Director of Performance role at EvenUp is the exact kind of challenge I get excited about: working with sharp, motivated teams to optimize outcomes, align execution with strategy, and raise the floor and ceiling of what's possible. I'd love the opportunity to contribute to that kind of work at a company with a mission like yours.

Let me know if you'd like to talk more. I'm ready when you are.

Warmly,
Adam Tervort
