Hiring Team

Input Output (IOG)

Dear IOG Team,

The more I read about this role and IOG's mission, the more convinced I am: this is exactly the kind of work I'm built for.

For the last decade, I've led operations across engineering, HR, IT, customer success, and internal systems at SpiderOak. I helped scale the company post-Series C by building frameworks that connected strategy to execution—OKRs, performance systems, onboarding flows, internal mobility models, and remote-ready documentation. I've managed both the architecture and the rollout of enterprise-wide change, all while keeping teams aligned, resourced, and moving.

IOG's shift from centralized to distributed operations speaks directly to my experience. I've guided teams through that same transition—supporting autonomy while maintaining cohesion. I know how to design process infrastructure that adapts to ambiguity, respects people's time, and scales without calcifying.

What excites me most, though, is your ambition to integrate human-centered operations with systems that respond to real feedback—AI-informed, strategically aligned, and globally aware. That's the kind of org I want to help build.

If this feels aligned, I'd love to connect.

Warmly,

Adam Tervort
