Hiring Team

Kong

Dear Kong Team,

What excites me most about this role is that it lives right at the intersection of strategy, systems, and human clarity—that's where I've spent the last decade of my career, even if my title didn't say "communications."

As VP of Operations at SpiderOak, I led internal communications during a period of global growth and change. I designed our async-first communication rhythms (weekly updates, town halls, onboarding flows), built systems to connect exec messaging with day-to-day priorities, and coached leaders on how to show up consistently and clearly. I also ran internal feedback and engagement programs, helping us stay connected as a remote-first, values-driven company.

What I've learned is that the most powerful internal comms aren't just about updates—they're about reinforcing trust, shaping culture, and helping people do their best work. I love building the scaffolding that makes those outcomes possible: clear messaging, inclusive channels, strong leadership habits, and systems that scale with grace.

I'd be excited to bring that mindset to Kong—and to help tell the internal story of your next chapter.

Thanks for considering. I'd love to connect.

Warmly,

Adam Tervort
