Hiring Team
Circle

Dear Circle Team,

I'm excited to apply for the Director of Product Marketing role at Circle. The opportunity to shape how transformative infrastructure like USDC reaches developers, partners, and the world at large aligns deeply with the work I've done—and the future I want to be part of.

I've led product marketing for complex, technical products across cybersecurity and secure collaboration. At SpiderOak, I directed marketing for SpiderOakONE and CrossClave—managing positioning, GTM strategy, and content from strategy through execution. I worked closely with engineering, design, and sales to ensure that roadmap and messaging were always aligned—and always relevant to the people we were serving.

But beyond the resume, this opportunity hits close to home. A friend of mine here in the U.S. sends money to his daughters in Nigeria every month using USDC. It's fast, reliable, and essential. Before stablecoins, this kind of cross-border support was expensive and unpredictable. Now it's frictionless. I've seen the difference this kind of infrastructure makes—not in theory, but in someone's actual life. And that makes Circle's mission real to me.

I thrive in roles that require both systems thinking and human storytelling. I've managed cross-functional teams, launched highly technical products, and built messaging frameworks that make complexity accessible. I'd love to bring that mindset to Circle—to help your team scale trust, clarity, and adoption for the next billion users.

Thanks for considering,
Adam Tervort
